What if education were no longer an exclusively human practice? What if we invited the more-than-human world into the classroom – and the classroom into the wild? How might learning change when the world itself becomes our teacher? These are just some of the questions I engaged with over the past five years during my PhD research. I am happy to invite you to the public defense of my dissertation entitled ‘Wilding Pedagogies. Exploring More-than-Human Ecologies of Learning for Deep Environmental Care’ to explore these questions together.

A few practical notes:

- Please arrive at the auditorium well before 1.00 PM, as the defense will start promptly and the doors will close once the ceremony has begun.
- If you have any questions regarding the defense, please reach out to my paranympths: rianne.kat@wur.nl & ravi.vandeport@wur.nl
